The world of retirement planning is on the precipice of a new reality. The era of retirees being rewarded with a gold watch and lifetime pension after 35 years of work with a company has virtually disappeared. A combination of unpredictable markets, the erosion of the defined benefit plans, the uncertainty about Social Security, and longer life expectancies means a new paradigm is emerging in retirement planning, challenging long-held beliefs in financial planning. This shift creates an opportunity to help you redefine how to plan for retirement and how to generate guaranteed income for life.
